	£25.00 inc P&P	On a Glass Lightly is Simon Whistler's own choice from his collected work as a glass engraver, a career spanning fifty years. In his introduction Simon explores the inferences and particular challenges of this art form and discusses the unique properties of glass as a medium for expression. The pieces range from early works supervised by his father and teacher, Sir Laurence Whistler, to the large church windows completed for the most part in the last decade of his life. His love of architecture and landscape painters was ideally suited to the fine technique of stipple engraving on goblets. The delicacy of stipple leads itself to the exploration of different effects of natural lighting, and can convey the subtlest nuances of light and shade. The other techniques of line and drill engraving are represented by his work on larger objects and flat glass. These include a new method of using edge-lit panels as the light source which brings an engraving to life. There are also examples of collaborations with his father. As most of Simon's work was commissioned and is held in private collections, this is a rare opportunity to see many of the pieces alongside his own descriptions of their conception and design process. The foreword by the author Christopher Booker immediately draws us into this subtle and fascinating world where, as Hooft, the seventeenth century Dutch poet says, 'One scratch, and the dumb glass speaks.' Includes a plate of the Betty Friend panel in our church. New Condition – probably the only place to purchase new copies of this book. Paperback: 158 pages Publisher: Libanus Press Ltd; 2nd Revised edition edition (1 Sept. 2004) Size: 287 mm x 212 mm Note: Only available by mail order and at special events.
